Perrigo Buys Stake in Cobrek

Perrigo Buys Stake in Cobrek

Perrigo has agreed to invest $12.5 million in Cobrek Pharmaceuticals, a unit of Pentech Pharmaceuticals, in return for a minority stake in the newly formed company.

Under the agreement, Pentech will contribute all of its interests in ANDA filings, including a potential first-to-file on a generic version of Genzyme's Hectorol (doxercalciferol), a treatment for hyperparathyroidism in patients with Stage 3 or 4 chronic kidney disease, Perrigo said.

Pentech also will contribute its filing for a generic version of Connetics' Luxiq (betamethasone valerate) foam, a treatment for dermatoses of the scalp. The company filed its Luxiq ANDA with a Paragraph IV certification last year and is involved in patent infringement litigation with Connetics and Stiefel Research Australia over the drug in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. The plaintiffs have alleged that Pentech is infringing on the '920 and '058 patents, both of which expire in 2016.

As part of the agreement, Perrigo said it will contribute two of its early-stage generic topical pipeline products. The parties will share the development costs and profits generated by these products, and Perrigo will serve as the exclusive distributor.
